Special Exhibition

“The Quarries of Imagination — Stones between Art and Artifact”

Main Features of the Exhibition

An experimental exhibition on the formal beauty and functions of stones, in the form of an installation combining compelling contemporary artworks with scientific specimens from the University of Tokyo collections.

- With the importance of stones in contemporary art as a point of departure, this experimental exhibition focusing on the formal beauty and functions of stones gathers 50 artworks and confronts them with scientific specimens from various disciplines including Mineralogy, Paleoanthropology and Archaeology.
- This exhibition co-curated with French artist Hugues Reip presents, in addition to scientific specimens from the University of Tokyo collections, artworks rarely seen in Japan from several contemporary collections in Japan and abroad, starting with the agnès b. collection.
- While elucidating how humans transform natural stones, attributing forms and functions to them in order to incorporate them as artifacts into their own living, this exhibition provides the opportunity to focus on how contemporary art includes natural stones in its own realm through such devices as readymades and trompe-l'œil, in a more global reflection on the aesthetic processes that characterize contemporary art today.

Main Exhibits

Mineralogical installation – Index of Stones [The University Museum, the University of Tokyo]

Microscope specimens prepared to identify the structure of each mineral. In this conceptual installation of several hundred microscope specimens, the immense variety of stones is visible at a glance.

Piero Gilardi, Rocce [Courtesy Galerie Sémiose, Paris]

An artwork in polyurethane in the form of a trompe-l'œil, the image of an extremely light stone examining the distinction between nature and artifact

3.

Double-Edged Stone Club with a Handle from the Final Jomon Period [The University Museum, the University of Tokyo]

A ritual tool with two intentionally engraved lines distinguishing the hilt from the rest, with an aesthetic perfection proper to the beauty of archetypal forms.

Abdelkader Benchamma, Untitled (Slates in a Quarry) [Courtesy galerie du jour agnès b., Paris]

The complex forms of inorganic stones appearing in this precise ink drawing open up new possibilities for abstract modes of expression. One of the contemporary artworks of the exhibition focusing on the formal possibilities of stones.

5.

Birdstone Collection [Private Collection]

A polished prehistoric artefact found in the northeastern regions of the actual United States of America. These items with a flat base and two diagonal perforations representing birds and animals in a rather abstract manner do not have a clearly identified function. Its minimalist aesthetics deeply resonates with the sculptural principles embodied by such modern artists as Jean Arp.

Charlotte Moth, Thinking Work, Working Thought [Courtesy Galerie Marcelle Alix, Paris]

The memory of traditional stone sculpture recorded in images then developed using the traditional stone-printing technique of lithography, in a re-interpretation of the times when stone was used as a material in art.
